PARTICIPANTS IN YELLOW FEVER INVESTIGATIONS IN CUBA

The Secretary of War, Hon. Elihu Root, in his annual report, 1902, said with reference to the conquest of yellow fever in Cuba in 1900-1901:

"The brilliant character of this scientific achievement, its inestimable value to mankind, the saving of thousands of lives, and the deliverance of the Atlantic Seacoast from constant apprehension, demand special recognition from the Government of the United States."

The Congress has, in concurrence with his opinion, by an act approved February 28, 1929, authorized and directed the Secretary of War to publish annually in the Army Register a Roll of Honor on which shall be carried the following names, and to define in appropriate language the part taken by each of these persons in the yellow fever investigation in Cuba. The same act provided that a gold medal be presented to each person named in the roll, or to the representatives of those who have died.

When sent to Cuba in June, 1900, at the head of the Yellow Fever Board of medical officers Major Walter Reed was already a distinguished man. In the Spanish-American War he had been at the head of another famous medical board which studied the camp epidemics of typhoid fever in the Army during that war, and made a great advance in our knowledge of the spread of that formidable disease in armies. He was professor of pathology and bacteriology at the Army Medical School, and also at the Columbian University in Washington, and stood high in his profession. In the work of the Yellow Fever Board he shared their labors and dangers, but his was always the originating, directing, and controlling mind. He died in Washington, D.C., November 23, 1902, following an operation for appendicitis.

Following his appointment as an acting assistant surgeon in 1898, Major Carroll was assigned to duty as assistant to Major Walter Reed. Early in the study of the agency of the mosquito as the transmitter of yellow fever, Major Carroll volunteered to be bitten by an infected mosquito. On August 31, 1900, he became ill and suffered a very severe attack of the disease. His was the first experimental case. He returned to Cuba a year later to make special studies of the blood of yellow fever patients. He died in Washington, D. C., September 16, 1907, having been promoted to the grade of Major, Medical Corps, by special authority of Congress in recognition of his services as a member of the Yellow Fever Board.

AGRAMONTE Aristides B-Cuba 3 June 68 MD Columbia Univ 92 Cont Surg 2 May 98 to 31 Aug 00 and 11 Feb to 15 June 03

Dr. Agramonte was born in Cuba, the son of a Cuban officer who fell in battle against the Spaniards. He was raised and educated in New York where his mother had taken refuge. He was serving with the Army in Cuba, in charge of the Army Medical Laboratory in Habana, when he was appointed a member of the Yellow Fever Board. His special qualifications as a pathologist, and his energy and ability contributed greatly to the success of the board. Of special value were his contributions to the demonstrations by the board disproving the then generally accepted theory that the bacillus icteroides was the causative agent of yellow fever. He died August 18, 1931, in New Orleans, La., where he was professor of tropical medicine in the Louisiana State University.

LAZEAR Jesse W B-Md 20 May 66 MD Columbia Univ 92 Cont surg 5 Feb to 25 Sept 00

Following graduation from the University of Maryland in 1892 Dr. Lazear did post-graduate work at the Pasteur Institute in Paris, and at Johns Hopkins University, specializing in mosquitoes and their relation to malarial infections. When the Yellow Fever Board was organized he was already in Cuba on duty with troops, and was studying yellow fever. He had charge of the mosquito work of the board when he contracted yellow fever while visiting yellow fever patients in order to infect mosquitoes for experimental purposes. He died, September 25, 1900, of this disease, a martyr to science. By his special knowledge and brilliant scientific attainments, as well as by the invaluable notes of his observations made in the last weeks of his life which he left, he contributed in the highest degree to the successful outcome of the investigation.

John H Andrus, private, Hospital Corps, although not immune, voluntarily nursed cases of yellow fever during an epidemic at Guanajay Barracks. Later, at Columbia Barracks, he was detailed for duty in Major Reed's laboratory. He became interested in the work of the Board, volunteered for experiment and was infected with yellow fever by an injection of blood from an experimental case. He became ill January 28,1901, being the twelfth case in the series of cases at Camp Lazear. He left the Army April 24, 1902, with character excellent. He died May 1, 1942, at U. S. Naval Hospital, Philadelphia, Pa.

BULLARD John R B-Mass 5 July 72

John R. Bullard, a graduate of Harvard University, at which institution he was a distinguished athlete, came to Cuba and was treated by Dr. James Carroll at Columbia Barracks for malarial fever. Becoming interested in the yellow-fever work, he volunteered and received, on October 15, 1901, an injection of the filtered blood of a Spaniard, an experimental case. The blood serum injected was the same as that employed in the cases of Privates Covington and Hamann and at the same time. Slight fever and discomfort were caused, but no illness. A week later, he received a blood injection from the veins of Private Hamann, who had been infected by the injection of filtered blood, and became ill with yellow fever, October 23, 1901. Having thus become immune, he continued to reside in Cuba after his recovery. He died September 18, 1944.

Robert P. Cooke entered the Medical Service of the Army June 9, 1900, and was on duty at Pinar del Rio during the yellow fever epidemic in the garrison there. He volunteered for the experiments at Camp Lazear and with two privates, Folk and Jernegan, were the first to undergo the trying ordeal of sleeping 21 successive nights in the soiled bedding used by yellow-fever patients. This was to determine whether the disease could be transmitted by infected bedding, clothing, and other objects. This experiment was of vast importance not only in making clear the method of transmission of the disease, but to the commerce of the world.

On October 15, 1901, he was given a subcutaneous injection of 3 cubic centimeters of the diluted and filtered blood serum from an experimental case of yellow fever. He became ill October 19 with a typical attack of yellow fever, from which he made a good recovery, and was returned to duty with his battery. He remained in service 25 years thereafter, being retired on August 23, 1926. He died April 20, 1934, in Gorgas General Hospital, Ancon, Canal Zone.

The case of William H. Dean was the second case of experimental yellow fever, being that which convinced the board that the theory of its conveyance by mosquitoes was well grounded, and being mentioned in their preliminary report as the Case X. Y. He volunteered and was bitten August 31, 1900, by the same mosquito which had infected Major Carroll four days before. He was also bitten by two other mosquitoes which had bitten a fatal case of yellow fever 12 days before, and a fourth mosquito which had been fed on three severe cases of yellow fever. He left the military service, August 17, 1902, with an excellent character, and died May 3, 1928.

He Volunteered for the experiments at Camp Lazear, and under-went the trying ordeal of sleeping 20 nights in the bed formerly occupied by a yellow-fever patient, and in the garment worn by him. His head lay on a towel stained with the blood of a case of yellow fever. He remained in the Army, serving in all the noncommissioned grades of the Medical Department, and won his commission in that department during the World War. Levi E. Polk volunteered for the experiments at Camp Lazear, and with two others, first underwent the long and trying ordeal of sleeping 21 consecutive nights in the soiled bedding and clothing of yellow-fever patients. This experiment was of vast importance commercially as well as scientifically, as it upset the accepted belief as to how the disease was transmitted, and resulted in the abolition of expensive and useless disinfections. He later was bitten by infected mosquitoes, and on January 23, 1901, suffered an attacked of yellow fever of moderate severity, this showing that he was nonimmune at the time of the former experiment. He was retired in 1923 after 25 years of honorable service. He died February 9, 1936, in Columbus, Ohio.
